Distinguished alumni award winners to speak at college’s Reunion Weekend and CE Conference

Virginia Tech alumnus and professor of medicine and microbiology at the University of California, San Francisco, Michael D. Barry, was presented with the 2020 Alumni of the Year Award at a special ceremony held as part of the college’s Reunion Weekend and CE Conference on June 20.

Alumni Corner

Sudden death: Four veterinary students, exactly?

Researching the cause of gallbladder mucocele in dogs

This Q&A with rock star veterinary practice owner: Everything you need to know

Maybe you can have it all

Veterinary team in Pasadena, Maryland. Capella, a recent Phi Zeta veterinary student and graduate of the college, joined the Calvert Vet in July 2020 as an intern. Capella and her family moved to Maryland from Texas after attending college, with a goal of pursuing a career as an equine veterinarian. In June, Monica Capella, a recent Phi Zeta veterinary student and graduate of the college, joined the Calvert Vet in Pasadena, Maryland. Capella and her family moved to Maryland from Texas after attending college, with a goal of pursuing a career as an equine veterinarian.

Upcoming Events

- VetTRAC gives students insight into veterinary school
- Veterinary college alumni hosts large virtual alumni events
- MD-PhD program expands in Virginia Tech Vet
- Vet Med in the News
- Alumni Corner
- Featured Faculty Research Publications
- VetTRAC introduces major classes
- Alumni Events
- Continuing Education Events
- News from the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine